Dear Mr. Moreno:

I write to respectfully inquire about the Los Angeles Angels' protocols to mitigate the potential spread of the novel coronavirus (COVID-19), particularly with the team's home opener scheduled for Thursday, March 26, at Angel Stadium in Anaheim, California.

With more than 50 confirmed coronavirus cases in our home state, and an average attendance of 37,321 people per game in 2019, we want to ensure the health and safety of team employees, players, and fans while they enjoy America's national pastime.

According to news reports, Major League Baseball (MLB) officials are in contact with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services about coronavirus. Reports also indicate that while MLB does not have plans to cancel or postpone regular season baseball games, an internal task force has been established to address the situation and the Office of the Commissioner has provided recommended measures on how to address coronavirus to front offices. Among the recommendations, teams are advised to maintain lines of communication with local public health agencies and consult with a local infectious-disease specialist.

To that end, I respectfully request an update on how the Los Angeles Angels will prepare for coronavirus during the upcoming season.

I thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Sincerely,

J. Luis Correa
Member of Congress
